GEN. MORGAN'S DEATH—WHO BETRAYED HIM.

SAVANNAH, October 25th.

Editor Morning News:

DEAR SIR: My attention having been called to an article which appeared in a Memphis paper—under signatures of General Alvin C. Gillem, U. S. A.—purporting to be a true version of the manner in which General John H. Morgan was killed, and the statement made by your efficient correspondent, whom I supposed to be an old and respected friend, in your issue of the 24th inst., compels me, very reluctantly, to appear in print to refute a willful misrepresentation on the part of the former, and an unintentional mistake of my worthy comrade. I had intended soon after the war, and several times since, to publish the statement of what passed under my personal observation on the evening of the 24th of September, the day of our command, but cautious friends advised against any reopening of dead issues to invite fresh animosities, which our model (?) accepted the situation declared would delay the day of the prodigal's return to the bosom of this "Glorious Union." The letter in the Memphis Appeal determined my course, and I had already commenced a reply, when your correspondent's notice of the circumstance causes me to hastily lay before your readers, and all who love our dear South and the glorious cause so manfully maintained, as succinct a statement as I can possibly make of the true events of that memorable day.

To anticipate: On the morning of the 21 of September, 1864, I received orders from Gen. Morgan, then at Abingdon, Va., to have the command ready for immediate movement. At that time it consisted of the old brigade, under command of Colonel D. Howard Smith, the second brigade, under command of Colonel H. L. Gilmer, and a detachment of General Vaughn's brigade (the latter composed of stragglers, men reporting from leave of absence, &c., and their brigades being absent with Gen. Early in Maryland), under command of Col. Wm. E. Bradford—the whole force numbering, as well as I can recollect, thirteen hundred men. We were stationed at Carter's station, on the Tennessee and Virginia railroad, about thirty miles from Greenville. Later in the day, orders came for the force to move the next morning early, on Greenville, and on the 24, General Morgan, with Major W. C. Gassett, G. M. Capt. Henry Clay, acting Aid-de-camp, Capt. James Rogers, acting Inspector General, and L. C. Johnson, clerk in my office, arrived on the train, and we immediately proceeded to Jonesboro, at that time the terminus of the road. We here met the command, and advanced in regular marching order on Greenville.

Not having an opportunity on the train of discussing his plans, the General invited me to ride forward with him, and we rode beyond our advance videttes. I remonstrated against this as dangerous, but the General said he desired to converse with me quietly. He seemed to have a foreboding of evil, for he remarked upon my suggestion that we might be captured, "they will never take me alive—they have sworn to kill me if they ever catch me again." We still rode in advance, and entered Greenville full fifteen minutes before our advance guard.

The General, after directing me as to the disposition of the troops, established his headquarters at the house of Mrs. Williams, but immediately sent for a detail of a lieutenant and ten men; and upon going up to the house, I learned that upon our arrival a Mrs. Williams, daughter-in-law of our hostess, had suddenly taken her departure, for the ostensible purpose of getting some "watermelons." To those who know that smile when I say, "watermelons," I refer whether the General suspected treachery or no. His reply to me was, that he wished the men to assist Mrs. Williams in bringing back her watermelons, and they must go until they found her." When alone, he told me his suspicions that Mrs. Williams had gone to give information to the enemy—"that that was nothing, as a thousand of our noble girls had brought us news; but I must prevent, if possible, the enemy getting wind of our approach." The scouting party returned unsuccessful, after a diligent search, and he reported that she had not been to the farm to which the elder Mrs. W. had said she had gone.

In the disposition of the division, Col. Bradford was placed on the extreme left, his left resting on the Norfolk river, and his line extending in a semi-circle until it reached Col. Gilmer's left, and the latter in the same manner to the left of Col. Smith—thus forming two thirds of a circle around Greenville, fronting the enemy's position, and about two miles from the town. I intimated the propriety of placing Col. Smith in Bradford's position, as the force of the latter was without regular organization; but the General said that he intended his men should lead the charge in the morning, and that he desired they should be relieved from all duty.

A written order was dispatched to Colonel Bradford to select his best officer and fifty picked men as a scouting party, with instructions to advance toward Bull's Gap until they struck the enemy's position, and to feel his picket until the command arrived the next morning. Captain Clay and Major Gassett were ordered to ride over the picket line, and see that every road and by-path was properly guarded, and at 1 o'clock P. M. they reported that all instructions had been fully executed.

After issuing orders for the command to rendezvous on the Bull Gap road at daylight the next morning, the General retired. He occupied a front room alone. At daylight on the morning of the 24th, I was awakened by the sentinel on duty, and went into the General's room to awaken him. Upon entering, finding that it was raining, he instructed me to command the order for immediate movement, fixing 7 o'clock as the hour.

"After receiving receipts from the different brigade commanders, I returned to bed, and was awakened by the heavy firing around the house, hastening into the General's room, I found that he had gone out, and on searching found him in the garden. A description of the grounds will better enable your readers to fully understand subsequent events. The enclosure occupied just one block, and therefore was surrounded by four streets. On the northern side, and occupying almost the whole space, stood the house, a large, substantial brick, fronting south. To the right and southward were the stables, and still further, and reaching to the front street, was a small vineyard of probably two hundred vines. In the southeast corner of the lot stood a small frame church, raised on brick columns about three feet from the ground. The remainder of the lot was filled with flowers and shrubbery."

I found the General in the vicinity of the church, and we took refuge under it to consult. He directed me to go to the top of the house, to see if there was an opening through which we could pass, and upon reaching the upper rooms, I went into each opening in different directions, and found every street blocked with cavalry, while lines of men were riding around next the fence (a high plank fence), shooting in all directions through the grounds. I could also see squads of men at the termini of each street on the outskirts of the village. Reporting these facts to the General, I urged him to go into the house and there surrender, as it was our only chance, and that growing momentarily less, as the fire was growing heavier and at point blank range. He replied: "It is useless; they have sworn never to take me a prisoner."

Hearing the church being forced open, we crossed over into the vineyard. It must here be stated that all movements were effected by each crawling and taking advantage of each bush, as the enemy were not over twenty yards from us, and crouching down among the vines, Mr. Johnston and myself again urged him to go up to the house. This he refused, and told us that he had better separate, as three together might be perceived. In leaving, the General shook hands with me and remarked:

"You will never see me again."

I had gone but a few steps when I heard him call out:

"Don't shoot! I surrender."

Stopping immediately, I looked around, and upon the outside of the fence, almost over the General, who had risen and was holding up his hands, sat a Yankee with gun presented, who replied:

"Surrender and be God damned—I know you!" and fired. I was so close that to this day I firmly believe that I can identify the man.

As soon as the shot was fired, and the General had fallen, he commenced shouting: "I've killed the damned horse-thief!" and began tearing down the fence, in which he was soon assisted by a large crowd of his comrades. [I neglected to mention that while we were doing about in the garden, some friends, in the noble guise of women were calling to the Yankees from their upper windows: "Yonder he goes!" "That's him!" "That's Morgan!" &c., &c.]

Being soon after captured and taken some distance out of town, I saw nothing of the General's body until, when, after repeated solicitations, the Sergeant who had me in charge consented to take me to General Gillem, the commander of the Federal forces, and on my way there I was stopped by a crowd of half-drunken wretches, who made me dismount. "They wanted to show me something." That "something" was the dead body of General Morgan thrown in a muddy ditch by the roadside, the features almost unrecognizable from mud and blood, and the body made save a pair of drawers, the clothing being torn and up and into small pieces as souvenirs of the "Dead Lion."

Upon reaching the town, I found General Gillem at Mrs. Williams' house, and with him was the Mrs. Williams who had gone out the day before after "watermelons," (2) and who had returned, strange to say, about the same time with the Yankees. I stated to General Gillem that my object in coming to him was for permission to get the General's body, "as his men were treating it like a dog."

"Ay, sir, and it shall lie there and rot like a dog," was his reply, and then followed a series of abuse, which would scarcely be palatable to your readers or pertinent to this statement. Still, he refused every proposition by which I had hoped to have succeeded in getting the General's body to his friends.

Our force having rallied, General Gillem was summoned to the front, and one of his staff, whom I have thought was Colonel Brownlow, though my memory may be at fault, but who, nevertheless, seemed a gentleman, offered to bring in the body, which was done, and in a small back room, Capt. Jas. Rogers and myself, with the assistance of a negro man, washed and dressed it. The wound was full in the breast, and seemed to have glanced on the breastbone, passing through the heart and coming out under the left arm. The head was much bruised and the skin broken in several places upon the face and temples, seeming a verification of the statement that the body had been thrown over a horse, with the head dangling against the stirrups.

Such, Mr. Editor, is a plain, unvarnished statement of facts, so far as my memory goes, for I have no date upon which to rely. I sent a similar statement to Colonel Reedy, the father of Mrs. Morgan, immediately after my escape, and when I reached Canada I also wrote more fully to the General's mother, in Lexington, Kentucky, and to Col. Dick Morgan, then a prisoner at Fort Warren. This is another reason why I have not given this statement sooner to the public, as I felt that, as the General's immediate family were in possession of the facts, they would publish them, if they thought it best. Now, however, as Gen. Gillem has deemed it prudent to make a statement, and as one of our own staff has indorsed it, I can no longer remain silent, not only in justice to the history of our holy cause, but to the sacred memory of one with whom it was my privilege and privilege to serve, and whom there never breathed a more noble and gallant spirit, whose name will be fondly cherished when those of his foul murderers shall have perished in oblivion.

Very respectfully,

C. A. WITHERS,

Formerly Adjutant on the staff of John H. Morgan.

THE TRI-WEEKLY YEOMAN.

THE PRAYER.

A pair of dimpled knees bent on the floor, Two little dove-like eyes, half shut in sleep, A little gold-ringed head—a this through the door
I hear—asking the Lord “a crystal soul” to keep.
The crimson cheeks seem by dawn's fingers stained,
The dimpled hands, clasped by the angels, seem,
As sunset's amber o'er her head is rained, Kindling her curls with many a tapering gleam.

Weathered are her tiny feet with stories old, Till rose leaf atmospheres, methinks I see, Enwrap them in their soft ethereal fold, With love's protection, to the dimpled knee;
For still the baby songs and tales will please, As when of first, like bits from silken skirt,
She tried to knot them, sitting on my knees, In baby accents, into threads again.

The little velvet lips just parted are, Through which the white winged thoughts troop forth to rise, As, through an opening bud, perfumes arise lavishly are wafted to the skies?
Now to her down come nuptial's crept, Where her bright curls, like juncos in the snow, Gleam out, as if the sunbeams had swept A little rift for such sweet flowers to grow.

Stephen Allen's Pocket Pious.

In the pocket book of Hon. Stephen Allen, who was drowned on board the U. Clay, was found a printed slip, apparently cut from a newspaper, of which the following is a copy, it is worthy to be put in every newspaper and every young man's heart:

Make few promises.
Always speak the truth.
Keep good company or none.
Never speak evil to any one.
Live up to your engagements.
Be just before you are generous.
Never play at any game of chance.
Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors.
Good character is above all things else.
Keep your own secrets if you have any.
Never borrow if you can possibly help it.
Do not marry until you are able to support a wife.
Keep yourself innocent if you would be happy.
When you speak to a man look him in the face.
Make no haste to be rich if you would prosper.
Ever live (misfortune excepted) within your income.
Save when you are young to spend when you are old.
Avoid temptation through fear you may not withstand it.
Never run into debt unless you see a way to get out again.
Small and steady gains give competency

Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts.
If any one speaks ill of you, let your life be

When you retire to bed think over what you Never be idle; if your hands can't be employed usefully, attend to the cultivation of your mind.

Read over the above maxims carefully and thoughtfully at least once a week.

How MONEY is MADE BY FARMING.—Much labor is done on farms that is not farming in its true sense. By such labor no money is ever made. A man may support himself and his family, keep out of debt, and have a few dollars in his pocket by practicing the most stringent economy. If he is otherwise than industrious and sober, he is on the down grade with loose habits, and the end is soon reached.
But farming in its true sense is a profession equal in dignity to that of law or medicine, and needs equal study, mental capacity, and intelligently directed labor to command success in it. The principles which underlie the practice of the true farmer must be well understood, and a steady, consistent course of operations must be followed. Having thoroughly learned the nature and capacity of the soil he possesses, and chosen the rotation most suitable, and the stock to be most profitably kept on it, he does not swerve from his chosen course, but in good markets and bad raises his regular crops, and keeps his land in regularly increasing fertility. No special cry temple or attractions him. He does not talk dairy this season or crops the next; but doubtless, if any particular product be in demand and brings a good price, he has some of it to sell and reaps his share of the advantage. He saves as much money as some men make by care and economy in purchasing and preserving tools, seeds, manures, and machines; and his business habits and constant readiness for all occasions give him reasonable security against the effects of adverse seasons and bad weather.
Always prepared, he is never too late, and always calm, he is never too soon; and thus, “taking time by the forelock,” he has the stern old tyrant at his command, and turns him at his will. He has no losses, and his gains are steady.

THE STRASBURG CLOCK.—This ingenious piece of horological mechanism is in excellent condition, and attracts as much attention as ever. At mid day a motley crowd of some two hundred people fills that transept of the cathedral which contains this curious work, the assemblage including peasants in quaint costumes, priests, school-boys, and a great proportion of English and American tourists.
At 12 o'clock the usual performance begins by a procession of the twelve apostles marching before Christ, who raises his hands, bestowing a blessing on each apostle as he passes by. At the same time a skeleton in the lower compartment strikes the hour with a hammer on a metallic disc. The clock on the summit of the clock ruffles his feathers, stretches out his neck and gives a good, sonorous crow, repeating his efforts three separate times. The noon display is thus terminated, but many of the spectators leave with an evident expression of disappointment, as if they had expected to see the whole front of the clock in motion, and a display of fireworks for a finale.

The London correspondent of the Scotsman writes: “The subject of the Tichborne claim is already beginning to be talked of, though the resumption of the trial is yet some weeks off. I mention it for the purpose of saying that it is stated that the claimant firmly believes that the first witness who will be put into the box on the renewal of the case will be the veritable Arthur Orton alive, and to be identified, so as to negative the assertion of the defendants that the claimant is that person, and assuming to be Sir Roger Tichborne.”

A floral curiosity may be produced by taking a stick of elder, boring out the pith, filling the cavity with good earth, and sowing in it seeds of flowers that bloom at the same time. The seed will soon germinate and the plants grow up together, and with the same stems, branches, and leaves, they will appear to grow on the same root.

It is recorded that we are under obligations to the Dutch for the invention of thim-bles; but after a time, in 1695, an establishment was set up in England by John Lofting, who, at Islington, near London, “making them of different metals, secured for himself a business of much profit.”

The Chicago Post of recent date, says: “The first divorce suit since the fire has been entered, and we are once more a city.”

MEDICAL.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.
For Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, in any climate, and under any adverse circumstances, has a remedy so completely restored to the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its influence on the human system, and its power to cure the most distressing and dangerous affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to nearly all forms of disease, and to young children, it is at the same time the most effective remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the distressing affections of the throat and lungs. As a preparation against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.
Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to robust health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.
Croup and Whooping Coughs find great protection from it.
It is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.
Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.
So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully attested.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Remittent Fever, Dubu-Ague, Periodic or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.
As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or violent drug, whatever it is in no wise injurious to any patient.
The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we have without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine.
Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments received of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.
Unimpaired persons, either resident in, or travelling through malarious localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.
For Fever and Ague, arising from impurity of the blood, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the liver into healthy activity.
For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.
Prescribed by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and acid all round the world.
